The Annual of the Highland High School
Published by the Senior Class.
Volume III.
The Staff wishes to present to you this Third Volume of the Iris published by the Class of 1922 as the result of the best efforts of those who contributed.

Were you to derive but half as much enjoyment from reviewing with us the events of our last year in Highland High as the actual events gave us we know you would consider yourself richly repaid. May this bring back memories of your own happy schooldays.
To Our Principal and Class Sponsor

Miss Rowena Galbraith

We dedicate the third volume of the IRIS to show our appreciation of the many favors shown by her, and her devotion to the best interests of the Senior Class.

The "it part" is there, but a
Finer Class President could be found nowhere.

Erna Sophia Ambuehl
If the sun shines; or if it don't shine
Erna's in good humor all the time.

Wilbert Edmund Lebegue
To argue, or debate just call on me
I'll make you believe 2 and 2 are 3.

Florence Wilma Dettmar
From Troy she has traveled early and late,
To be a '22 graduate.

Waldo William Hagnauer
In Waldo a rare machinist we've found,
"Trouble with a ear"—his opinion is sound.
Edna Caroline Brunner
To our class she’s an added attraction;
A lively girl with lots of “pep” and action.

Russell Shubert Suppiger
Don’t talk of his Saxophone separation
From it he obtains all his pure inspiration.

Edythe Elizabeth Paul
Rising aspirations of business renown,
In this worthy Senior will surely be found.

Max DeMoulin Rogier
I’ve mastered Geometry, Physics and all
I’m earnestly awaiting my future call.

Faye Esta Rogier
Quiet, kind, and light hearted Faye,
Never a friend would she betray.
Alice Lulu Thurnau
To be first in class was not my aim;
Regardless of fame, I’ve played a fair game.

Richard Louis Herman Iberg
Round, fat, and funny
His future will surely bring money.

Grace Marie Kamm
Tell us Grace, tell us why
You appear so wondrous Coy?

Arthur Edward Thurnau
Four fruitful years in Highland High
I’ve conquered Caesar, tho still I’m shy.
Prophecy of the Class of 1922

Prophecy, according to the popular acceptance is essentially a prediction, a fore-telling of the events by inspired personages. Years ago people wished to have their future revealed and were very superstitious; although the people of this age are not so superstitious as they, yet it seems interesting to many to have someone predict a future for them.

Probably, because of this desire to know the unrevealed, prophecies are written and in advanced high schools over the United States to-day, the revelation of the future of the graduating class has become one of the features of their annual.

Upon me, as a Junior, falls this duty of revelation, and it is with a feeling of awe that I have attempted to predict the future of a class of such ability and genius as the class of '22.

Ten years have passed since the class of '22 graduated from the Highland High School, and entered upon the more serious duties of life. In all that time I had never heard a word as to the whereabouts or occupations of any of the members. The reason was that in my work as school inspector, I had been forced to remain entirely in the eastern section of the country, and being far removed from Highland, had failed to learn any news concerning those worthy '22 graduates. Now however, in June, 1932, being in receipt of a notice of my month's annual vacation, I decided, although the time was short to journey to Highland and inquire as to the whereabouts of my various friends.

I left by way of Chicago, and arriving there registered at the Blackstone Hotel, glad indeed to be once more in my native state. Upon being shown to my room, I was informed by the bell-boy that before dinner that evening there was a musicale in the salon of the hotel. Having two leisure hours before dinner I decided, although not a lover of music myself, to attend the concert.

The program was opened with a 50 piece orchestra and, to my astonishment, the leader was none other than Clifford Collins, '22's flutist. Immediately, at the conclusion of the entertainment, I made my way to him, and after introducing myself, we began talking over school days. He said, that to his knowledge no other of his class members lived in Chicago, although Edith Paul had been his pianist, but resigned and was now happily married, living in Oak Park, Illinois. He said as yet he had not taken the marriage vows, but intended to think seriously upon it in the near future. The hour was growing late so I retired to my room, overjoyed by the fact that I had heard news of two of '22's graduates.

The next afternoon I left for Highland via Effingham. I knew that I would have to ride all night so was well supplied with reading material in order to while away the long hours profitably.

While glancing over the headlines in the Chicago Tribune the following notice attracted my attention: "Max Rogier, of Highland, elected State Superintendent." Could this be the Max Rogier I had known, one of '22's most capable students? On reading more of the article I discovered that I had surmised correctly, and it was none other than he.

My interest from the paper was detracted by the low argumentative tones of a couple who sat almost directly in front of me. At the same moment the lady turned around and exclaimed, "Why don't you know me?" To my vexation, I could not place her in my mind, and told her so. "Why I'm Florence Dettmar, Advocate of Women's Rights in the U. S. A." Now, who would have thought that Florence would have become an itinerant suffragist. She seemed to be well satisfied with her work, and said she had just visited Kankakee where she had met Erna Ambuehl, who was a most promising business woman of that city, being the Secretary of a large Loan and Trust Company.
By this time the man who had been talking to Florence came back and was introduced to me as Arthur Thurnau, traveling salesman, for a wholesale farm implement firm. Arthur seemed just as quiet as ever. Only when Florence mentioned Woman's Suffrage, he could argue like any statesman.

At the next station Florence and Arthur left me, Florence having a lecture booked for the following night, and Arthur with intentions of selling his wares.

The rest of the journey passed uneventfully and I arrived in Highland at six the next morning. I immediately went to a hotel, registered, ate my breakfast and then set out for a survey of my old home town. I noticed that in my absence it had changed considerably. The school was what first attracted my attention. The children were playing on the grounds, just as we had played many years ago. The old brick walls looked "mighty friendly," and as I slowly walked toward the building I could not help remembering our High School song—

"And when time's swift tide has borne us beyond the lesson's sway, and the old brick walls have vanished with their round of work and play. As the cares of life shall thicken, let us turn our memories back and renew the old time courage as we think of Red and Black."

I visited the different rooms of the school and learned from the Superintendent that the building no longer held both High School and Grammar School pupils but the increase in population had necessitated the building of a High School in another part of town. All the instructors were strange to me except the principal, also the eighth grade teacher whom I at once recognized as Alice Thurnau. We had a long talk together, during which I told her about seeing Arthur. I left her with a promise to be at the theatre that night.

The entertainment held more of a surprise for me, than I had expected, because Russell Suppiger proved to be among the performers. By diligent work Russell had become a master of the saxophone. I was more than pleased to know that two musicians of great promise were members of the class of '22.

The following morning I was awakened by a telephone call from Grace Kamm. She had learned of my being in Highland and as her visit was short in the city, wanted to see me in the afternoon. She was a nurse in a Hospital at Pittsburg Pa., and was at home at the time for a short vacation. She told me that she had met Waldo Hagnaueer, about a year ago, while doing charity work in Columbus, Ohio. He was a young doctor, living at the time in Marysville.

Later in the afternoon we took a drive out in the country. We passed many up-to-date farms, but the one that appealed to us the most was an extensive farm, with numerous attractive buildings. The home was very beautiful and everywhere were signs of prosperity. A sign on the gateway told us that it was Oakdale farm owned by Wilbert Leegue. We could not help taking advantage of such a pleasant opportunity to see an old friend. We drove up to the house and were met with a warm welcome by Wilbert. He told us that Richard Iberg had recently visited him, but now was in Michigan, where the baseball season had just opened. Richard was a fielder on a large team, and famed for his batting averages.

He also told us that Faye Fogier had taught school near there, for a few years, but now was doing missionary work in Africa.

The next few days were spent very pleasantly with my old friends. Since I was not due back at work for more than a week, I decided to return home through St. Louis. While there I met Francis Ittner. He was a lawyer with extensive practice.

On the day of my departure, while at Union Station I met another friend.

I was patiently waiting for my train, when my thoughts were interrupted by a familiar voice speaking to me. I turned and saw standing near me a well-dressed young lady whom I, with some difficulty, recognized as Edna Brunner. She was at the head of a Parisian Beauty Shop in San Francisco, California and had just arrived in St. Louis for a month's visit with her sister.

After a few pleasant moments with her, I was forced to leave my mind was filled with pleasant memories of my old schoolmates.

The Last Will and Testament of the Class of '22.

The Class of Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-two of Highland High School, feeling entirely qualified to judge for ourselves and having good sense as well as reason, do herewith bequeath all understanding, characteristics, and numerous goods and chattels that still survive after four years of diligent and painstaking labor in the above named institution.

TO THE FACULTY

1. We bequeath new life and hope together with all the cheerfulness and jollity of the class of '22.
2. The privilege of knocking the Seniors of '23.

TO THE JUNIORS

1. Our ever ready spirit, cheerfulness, good looks and love of pleasure.
2. The privilege of enjoying the lectures of the faculty the next ensuing school term.
3. The pleasure of enduring an oversupply of heat on warm days and an undersupply on cold days.
4. The hearty wish that they cooperate with the superintendent and faculty in eliminating such difficulties which chance to arise as the Class of '22 has done.
5. To Bertha Meyer, Erna Ambuehl leaves her amiability; to her classmates and under-classmen and to Loraine Neumann the privilege of giggling every school day in the school term.
6. Richard Iberg bequeaths to Leighton Collins his ability to debate about nothing.
7. Francis Ittner leaves with best wishes his business-like air and intellectual abilities to Maurice Schott.
8. Russell Suppiger leaves his indiscreet actions and careless manners to Julius Marti, his musical talent to Thelo Pabst and to Elmer Jenny his ability to acquire good grades without study.
9. Grace Kamm gives Lorna Spencer the privilege of chewing gum and causing a commotion in the rear of the assembly without being detected and still retaining that baby look of innocence on her face.
10. Waldo Hagnauer bequeaths to John Flaherty the right at any girl's side, excepting Edna Hill's.

TO THE SOPHOMORES

1. Faye Rogier leaves her one predominating characteristic, "modesty," and her ever readiness to please, to Ellen Stokes.
2. Edna Brunner bequeaths her natural and practical ability in hair dressing to Harriet Lynch.
3. Max Rogier leaves his ever increasing understanding of feminine nature and their aims in life to Roscoe Menz.
4. To Edward Suppiger, Wilbert Lebegue leaves his knack of giving quick and witty answers and to Waldo Hug his minstrel manners.

TO THE FRESHIES

1. To Elmer Iberg, Arthur Thurnau bequeaths several feet of his towering height.
2. Clifford Collins leaves his great inventive genius and interest in electrical projects to Floyd Tschannen.
3. Alice Thurnau bequeaths to Louise Kapp her diligent watchfulness over her brother and the Marcelle waves to Irma Leutwiler.
4. Edith Paul willingly leaves her obstinate mental attitude in all controversies and toward all classmates to Vera Zopf.
5. Florence Dettmar bequeaths her competence and ability in procuring 90’s on examination to Edmund Kamm.

The most important boon of the Class of ’22 to the Highland High School students is the privilege of determining the source of the mysterious and annoying disturbances in the assembly, the seventh hour of the day.

We do hereby appoint all members of the “Senior Class” to act as executors of our last Will and Testament.

In witness whereof: the “Senior Class” has set its hand and seal to this their last Will and Testament.

Senior Class ’22

Signed, sealed, and published by the above mentioned “Senior Class” as their last will and testament in their presence and in the presence of both us, who at their request, have hereunto subscribed our names as witness thereto:

Witnesses:

Florence Dettmar
Edna Brunner.

During the summer months of the year nineteen nineteen a large number of boys and girls were making elaborate preparations for a journey over the "Hazardous Sea of High School Life." All had received their passports from the grades permitting them to go on the journey. According to custom the voyage was to be divided into four parts of nine months duration, with a three months' furlough between each division.

In due time we were notified that our ship was to leave the port promptly at 8:40, Monday morning September the first. When that day came and after we had all scrambled aboard, those of us who had passed thru the local grades noticed many new and strange faces. However it did not take long until all became thoroughly acquainted with one another. All told, there were thirty-three in the crew. This was by far the largest number of boys and girls that had ever set out on a single expedition up to that time. In a short time we rounded the cape of "Faint-heartedness," adjusted ourselves to our new surroundings and began to learn some of the lessons we must know before we were termed "good sailors."

We received our share of the hazing which the more experienced sailors find so much delight in inflicting. We enjoyed it too (!). Most of us took it good-naturedly knowing full well that if we resisted we would be the worse off for it.

After the strangeness of our new surroundings had worn off, all members of the crew were summoned into the cabin for the purpose of electing officers for the first part of the journey. Leighton Collins was chosen to pilot the ship over the first leg of the journey. Nelson Foehner was elected as his assistant and Elmer Jenne was picked to take charge of the ship's books and finances.

In October we were in receipt of a message from the ship of '20 inviting us to attend a Hallowe-en party to be given at post "Gymnasium." Of course we were the goat but we again took our hazing good-naturedly.

The first part of our journey was a little more than about half over when we received an invitation from the ship of '22 to attend a "Party of Hearts." This was also given at port "Gymnasium."

The days and weeks passed rapidly on and it was not long until the signs of spring began to appear and with them we knew our first trip was nearing the end. Influenced by these things we decided to give some form of entertainment for our more experienced sea mates. Therefore messages were sent to the ships of '20, '21, '22 requesting their presence at a wiener-roast to be given at the harbor of "Lindendale Park."

Some of us had not been able to conquer all the obstacles which came up before us. Some had perished in the storms and blizzards of Latin and Algebra and the result was that a number of us had given up the struggle and deserted the ship. In spite of this fact we made a rather good showing in all our trials. A few had also left the ship in order to swim to the land of "Employment."

The end of May was coming fast and we were all patiently waiting for the day on which we would reach the port of "Self Confidence," our first destination. At last this was reached and we all departed for a three months' furlough on dry land.
Our three months furlough passed quickly and when September came we started on the second leg of our journey. This time our destination was the port of "Leisure Hours." On looking around we noticed that quite a number of the original crew had not returned. Undoubtedly they had strayed too far from shore and had become lost. Our ranks were not depleted as much as it might seem because several new faces again greeted us. Nevertheless our crew had decreased ten in number, there being only twenty-three names on the register.

A meeting was again held in the cabin for the election of officers. Leighton Collins was again chosen to captain the ship. Lorna Spencer became his chief aid and Marlon Seegar took over the control of the ship's books and finances.

As the year passed on we decided to choose colors for the ship, so that it would have a gayer appearance. The final vote showed that they were to be flame and gray. Our motto was also chosen and after it had been decided upon, the words, "We have won by perseverance" were painted on the prow of the ship.

During this second cruise our number was again decreased because of the fact that several of the crew again swam to the land of "Employment."

Final examinations came and passed and we arrived at the port of "Leisure Hours." According to our log-book our entire journey was now half completed. We left the ship in port and in saying good-bye to one another the majority of us promised to return again in three months and continue our voyage.

The majority of us did return, while some unfortunate ones were forced to remain behind. Upon taking the enrollment it was found that there were now only sixteen bona fide sailors left out of the thirty-three that began the journey.

The officers chosen for our third part of the voyage are Lorna Spencer as chief commander, Nelson Foehner as her assistant, and Pearl Stoecklin taking care of the ship's books and funds.

During the course of the cruise we received a message that a sailor's dance was to be given at port "Gymnasium" and that all that could, should attend. Altho not very many attended, an enjoyable evening was spent by those that did.

The weeks passed quickly and spring had come again. The crew of the ship of '22 influenced by the warmth decided to give a wiener-roast at the harbor of "Lindendale Park." We naturally turned out in goodly numbers.

We are now busy for the banquet which, according to custom is annually given to the crew of that ship which will reach the harbor of "Culmination" the soonest. It will be given on the twenty-first of April and we will return the hospitality shown towards us some weeks before.

In just a month and one-half the third lap of our cruise will be over and we will have reached the port "Good Times." For the greater part of us this has been the most difficult part of the journey that we have yet encountered. We will all be joyful when it will be over, not because we wish to shorten our voyage, but because the heavy burdens which now rest on so many of our shoulders will be removed.

The coming furlough will probably be the last that a great number of us will have for some time, because when we complete the next part of the cruise and reach the harbor of "Culmination," many of us will set sail on that, even greater "Sea of Life." There it will be that we will first realize how much we have gained and prospered by completing the journey over the "Hazardous Sea of High School Life."
Sophomore Class History

When we, the Sophomore class entered H. H. S. in 1920 as Freshies, we were as verdant as numerically strong. Freshies always are both.

In connection with this period of our history is a record of numerous embarrassing incidents but we will not recall painful recollections since there are so many pleasing ones.

As Sophomores we feel rather chesty over the fact of having been the first class to successfully publish an "honest-to-goodness" high school paper, with its regular editorial staff, business staff, etc. The first issue of the "Square News" made a distinct hit, and each succeeding number has been looked forward to with interest. It has been self-supporting financially.

On February 10th our class gave a Valentine party for the faculty and class students, which proved successful.

In a General Information test and intelligence test a member of our class took highest honors, while the rest of the class did exceedingly well, outranking as a whole every division of the H.H.S.

When it comes to athletics the Sophs took a prominent part. Several members of the boys' basketball team were from our class, while the Sophomore girls' team proved victors in the interclass tournament.

Thus in the class room, in the gym and in social events, we, the Sophs pride ourselves in upholding the prestige of the old H. H. S.

We have enjoyed every day of the past school year, and feel amply qualified to fill the shoes of the present day Juniors.

Sophomore Alphabet

A—stands for Arthur a big little boy, who is always inventing some nice little toy.
B—stands for Bernice who would cry, if some one would tell her a lie.
C—stands for Clarence, who is bothered with pains, due to his head so packed full of brains.
D—stands for no one in the class, so we'll nicely let it pass.
E—stands for Esther who walks the street in order to shorten her long slender feet.
F—stands for Florence who makes a row, whenever she has to get the cow.
G—stands for Glenn who carries a sword, when he rides in Clarence Ludwig's Ford.

H—stands for Helen who is very big, so don't be surprised if you see her jig.
I—stands for Irma who fell off of her chair, when she heard she could go to the Highland Fair.
K—stands for Kathryn who missed the party, therefore she isn't very hearty.
L—stands for Lucille, a charming girl, who probably will marry a wealthy Earl.
N—stands for Norman who likes to play, so every night he hits the hay.
V—stands for Vernon who would run, if he would see a big old bum.
W—stands for Waldo the biggest of the class, whom we know will certainly pass.

XYZ—stands for the remainder of the group Who are all very fond of hot chile soup.

Now we will leave them and hope for more. On graduation day in nineteen hundred and twenty-four...
History of Freshman Class

Class Officers:
President: Esther Clancy.
Vice President: Vincent Flaherty.
Secretary: Elmer Iberg.

The Freshman class has an enrollment of forty-two students. About twenty-five came over from the Highland eighth grade, while a number joined us from the surrounding towns.

During the first few days the usual hazing of the Freshmen boys went on. Will the upper class boys ever outgrow such ignorant customs? The girls had to take all kinds of pleasing compliments from those wise upper classmen, who thought we were so green.

In October our first class meeting was held at which the above named officers were appointed by Supt. C. L. Dietz.

In the latter part of October our class, accompanied by Miss Parker, went on a hike and had a wiener-roast. It was a great success, for everyone had a good time.

Early in November came the mid semester exams. Oh, What a shock for the Freshies! A few unfortunate ones were dropped from their classes but the majority of them did very well.

Taking into consideration the odd sizes and shapes of our classmen, yet with sweet and loving personalities, we are proud of our class, and hope to make old Highland High glad that she willingly accepted the class of '25.

Ten Commandments For Freshmen

I. Honor thy teacher and thy upper classmen; that thy ways and manners shall not be a bore to those about thee.
II. Thou shalt not copy, talk or giggle with the upper classmen.
III. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's brightness, popularity, handsomeness, fine clothes and winning ways.
IV. Thou shalt not eat candy, chew gum nor throw paper balls at thy fellow students.
V. Thou shalt not do anything which is forbidden; remember that it is an unpardonable sin to turn around and cast sarcastic looks at the seniors, and it is not permissible to even talk to a worthy senior.
VI. Always remember to carry out the commands and wishes of the seniors even tho it may cost thy happiness and make thee a creature of contempt in the eyes of thy teacher.
VII. Remember to wear thy hair hanging for freshmen are entirely too young to walk around with tresses piled high upon their heads.
VIII. Thou shalt not get into the limelight for the upper classmen are sure to dim your lights.
IX. Remember that thou shalt not be invited to any of the social events enjoyed by upper classmen—thy turn shall come anon—thou will someday be a Sophomore.
X. Thou shalt always keep before thee the thought that after five days of labor come two days of bliss, which are free from all thoughts of school and its sorrows.
Highland High School, you may stand and recite.

1. Where was the first school in this vicinity?
   The first school was a log cabin located on the St. Jacob road, two miles west of town.
2. When and where was Highland's first school house erected?
   In 1840, on the Methodist Hill.
3. Who was the founder?
   Joseph Suppiger has the honor of being the founder.
4. How was this school kept up?
   This school was supported by tuition fees paid by pupils.
5. Where was the next school building?
   The site of the present Evangelical church was the next school building location.
6. As the population of Highland increased what educational provisions were made?
   A new school was built north of the square in 1851. Later one was built on the south side of the square. Then in 1894, the present school building was erected.
7. When was the High School first opened?
   In 1913 the annex was completed and special courses were offered students.

    We have a paper published by the Sophomore class each month called the "Square News" and the third volume of the "Iris," our annual, will appear this year.
14. What kind of athletics do you have?
    Girls B. B. teams and Boys B. B. team. The boys also have track work.
    You have done very well; you may be seated.
OUR COACH. 990

Under the influence of Coach Siegrist we saw come into existence the most enthusiastic athletic spirit, which has ever backed the good old "Red and Black." His quintet in basket ball, made a good showing in spite of the fact that only one had ever played an opposing team.

Mr. Siegrist succeeded in instilling within the boys an excellent spirit and determination to help each other which resulted in some of the victories as the season advanced. He was always willing to make a sacrifice of time for the benefit of the team.

OUR TEAM

Nelson Foehner.
"Nel" as captain of the team proved worthy of his place. He played the position of running guard, and was quick and fast. He was always where he was needed. He was quick at passing the ball, and above all, his opposing players found it hard to keep unguarded.

Leighton Collins.
"Leight" was a guard who fooled many opposing players. He did not have the weight needed for a guard, and for this reason many a team thought he was what they termed "easy meat," but they were mistaken, for "Leight" was a good player, his opponents only making an average of one goal a game.

Edward Suppiger, Jr.
"Sup" was center, the heavy weight of the team. His ability to get the tip gave the other members of the team an opportunity to do some excellent pass work. He developed a good eye for the goal and ranked second in goal shooting.

Richard Iberg.
"Dick" could not play every game of the season, due to injuries which he received. He had plenty of weight, a good eye for the goal, and quickness of action. Of all the team, he is the one who made the most sacrifice for the old "Red and Black."

Norman Tuffli.
"Nat" was the high scoring man of the team. He was always where he was needed, and was full of pep. He was good at passing the ball, and whenever he had a clear shot, the score keeper had to mark down another goal.

Roosece Menz.
"Menzz" showed his skill and good playing when opportunity offered. During Iberg's absence from the team, he showed his fellow players what he could do, for he was always successful in dropping a couple of baskets. The day will come when Menz will be a star player.

Waldo Hug.
"Wallie" had no chance to show his skill in playing before spectators, but in practice games he brought it forth. His large muscular body and his ability to stand hard playing for a long while, will make Wallie a man which Highland will need in the years to come.

OUR GAMES

The first game to be scheduled for the season was with Lebanon on October 27th. It was the first game with an outside team the Highland boys had ever played and as a result they were defeated by a score of 11 to 4.

The next Friday success was ours, when the team met Troy's quintet on our floor. The game was played fast, too fast for Troy for at the end Troy had 4 points to our 29.
On December 2nd, our team played one of the hardest fought games of the season. We played O’Fallon on her own court and as both teams were bent on victory, the scoring was about equal until the last quarter, when O’Fallon took the lead.

Our next game was on December 9th, when our team visited Collinsville; accompanied by a large enthusiastic bunch of rooters. The game was the fastest one played by our boys. At the end of the third quarter the score was tied, but in spite of all the new players which they put in, Highland ended the game with a victory over Collinsville, 18—12.

On December 16th, the boys had an occasion to play off a tie, but O’Fallon, the opposing team, had a horse shoe somewhere and dropped the ball into the basket. Score was 15-13 in favor of O’Fallon. This was the only team that defeated our boys twice.

The Alumni predicted an easy victory for themselves on Dec. 23rd. but when the fatal hour came, they had to hold a “Stiff upper lip,” and were defeated by a score of 23-10.

We met defeat on January 13th, when the Collinsville boys played here. Score 15-12.

Hurrah! Highland beat Lebanon 18-13. Thirteen was evidently the unlucky number for Lebanon or else a lucky one for Highland. The game was evenly matched until the end, when the “Red and Black” forged ahead.

January 27th. the local team went to Troy and gave them a score to the tune of 18-0. Our boys played a hard defensive game, at the same time running up a lively score. The enthusiastic rooters put a lot of pep into the game.

After three weeks of no practice a game with Pocahontas was scheduled. The first half was slow, and hardly any points were scored, but as the game proceeded the skill of the “Red and Black” came back, giving “Pok’key” a score of 16-1.

Inseparables.
Leighton Collins and his smile.
Edythe Paul and her ear-rings.

Wilma Matte.
"Matter" is our forward. She's quick to reach the ball and shoot goals.

Esther Hebrank.
"Hebbie" is another promising young forward who's ever on the alert and has a fine way of passing the ball.

Virginia Wiltz.
"Cinie" shows wonderful ability and promises to be at her old position as center next year.

Ellen Stokes.
"Chick" enters the game with a spirit of fair play and with a determination to get the ball to her forwards.

Lucille Hoyt.
Lucille is seldom heard, never attempts any sensational plays but is fast on her feet and sure of her passes.

Helen Hanes.
Helen's physique and ability to evade the guards keeps the opposing team in perpetual anxiety.

Peg O' My Heart, a comedy of youth was given at the Opera House, March 17, by the three upper classes. The action took place at Regal Villa, the house of Mrs. Chichester, an English aristocrat. Mrs. Chichester learns in the opening scene that through the failure of her bank she had been left penniless. By an irony of fate her deceased brother's lawyer arrives and tells her that Mr. Kingsworth, her brother, has left his entire estate to a niece, Margaret O'Connell, but that $1000 a year will be paid to anyone who will educate and train the girl "in accordance with the dignity and traditions of the Kingsworths."

After consideration, Mrs. Chichester decides to take charge of her niece. For the first month "Peg's" life is made miserable by Mrs. Chichester and her son and daughter, Alaric and Ethel, but she finds a few bright spots in the visits of "Mr. Jerry". By reason of the money she is to inherit, Peg has three offers of marriage, one from Alaric, Hawkes, the lawyer, and Christ Brent, Ethel's married lover. These proposals are refused, however, and Peg accepts the fourth man, Jerry, who is in reality Sir Gerald Adair.

The cast was well chosen by Miss Galbraith, the director, and went through the whole production without a break. The part of Peg, the little Irish heroine was taken by Wilma Matter who, with the aid of a wig, really looked and spoke like a girl from the "Land of Shamrock." Her lover, Jerry, was Leighton Collins, a dashing young man capable of playing the part of hero in comedy or drama. Erna Buehler, her hair powdered to add a few years to her appearance successfully impersonated Mrs. Chichester, the cold and haughty dowager. Her son Alaric was portrayed by Norman Tuffli who stuttered to perfection and punctuated his sentences with "Really you know" and "It can't be done." As Ethel Chichester, Bertha Meyer appeared as the type of girl who has had everything her way since her birth and who likes nothing better than to throw sneers at the lower classes. Her lover Christian Brent was Franciis Ittner and showed a man of selfish thoughts only. Roscoe Menz took the part of Mr. Hawkes, the lawyer, and looked serious throughout the play. Waldo Hug as the butler and Pearl Stoecklin as maid of the house, showed their disgust with the whole matter and yet obeyed the wish of each member of the family.

"Did You Ever Stop To Think?"

Did you ever stop to think what type of student has the most time to take part in school activities aside from regular classes? "Sure" you say, "it's the one who is carrying a light course and he doesn't have anything to do but belong to literary societies, be active in athletics, etc. No my friend if you will investigate the matter you will in general find a far different story. The boy or girl who is carrying the heaviest course will nine times out of ten be just the one to take up the duties as president of some school organization, will be captain of the basket ball or football team and somehow or other you will find that he has time to be a member of a literary society program committee or among the number of students who give morning exercises in the assembly. If a play cast is being selected the people who can carry the parts best are invariably so busy that you hesitate to ask them to take on any more work. But in the end you do it, they assume the new responsibility and by some means they manage to find time for it.

A committee must be appointed to arrange for a High School party. The class advisor suggests using some people who are not busy otherwise but immediately this thought presents itself. No one can do that quite so well as John Brown, Mary Smith and Jane Felts. All right they are appointed but are they the carefree High School Students? No. John is perhaps a member of the basket ball team, and the orchestra while Mary and Jane are the very pillars of a literary society or debating club and are probably strong students in the dramatic club.

You may say that's all very well but it doesn't apply to our school. Now there is just the point. It does. How many of the people who are unprepared and are doing poor work in our school can legitimately say that they were so busy with school activities that they didn't have time to study? The boy or girl who offers an excuse for poor work the oftener is the one who who has time to burn but the live down to hard work. He doesn't take part in school activities because he doesn't have enough life or "pep."

The same is true of the community. The man who does most for the town is not the loafer is just too lazy to buckle right energetic man who is so busy that he tries to live a twenty-five hour day in twenty-four. Think it over and decide what kind of a student you are and then from that decide what kind of a citizen you are going to be. Ask yourself "What kind of a school we would have if every student were just like me!"

"A Dream"

I was walking along a quiet street in Los Angeles reading a letter I had just received from my mother. She hoped I was doing well at college and that I was in perfect health, etc. Then came the news. She said that friends in Highland had received word from Miss Galbraith who lived in Los Angeles. She even sent me Miss Galbraith's address and told me to look her up. As this was Saturday and I had nothing to do. I went to the address mother had sent me.

The house was situated out in the suburbs in a very pretty neighborhood. I rang the bell and soon some one opened the door. I, overjoyed, cannot express my feelings well enough on seeing my teacher of Highland High. She had changed very little, except that she was a bit stouter. I soon found out that she talked no less than when I went to High."
Soon a handsome young man entered the room and she introduced him to me as her husband. I was not a bit surprised because I had always pictured her marrying a man like him. She told me he was an old schoolmate of hers in Carbondale and was the one who always told her how much better Sparta was than Highland.

They asked me to stay at their home until school would start Monday. Of course I stayed and that day I talked more than I ever did in all my life. We talked about the folks back home and she said that Mrs. Siegrist kept her posted on all the teachers of nineteen twenty-two. "Mrs. Siegrist," I fairly shrieked. Yes, Miss Galbraith told me that Mr. Siegrist had been married for over ten years. He no longer was a science teacher in Highland, but an inspector of science at Illinois University.

Then Miss Galbraith, or rather Mrs. W——— passed a box of divinity she had just received from Mrs. Siegrist that morning. It was the kind for which she had been noted for making during her college days at Illinois U.

While we talked I picked up a book from the table and looked at the title, "Memoirs of a Schoolmaster." I carelessly opened the book and looked at the author's name. Surprised? I certainly was, for there was written "Memoirs of a Schoolmaster" or "My Memoirs of Forty Years" by C. L. Dietz.

The book "she declared" represents the fruit of years of effort on the part of several publishers to induce Professor Dietz to write his memoirs. And Miss Wildi, "began Miss Galbraith, "Oh Yes, where is she, what is she doing?" I quickly asked.

"Just a minute and I'll tell you about every one of the '21-'22 Faculty. Miss Wildi is always just as happy as she was when you were in school. She is now traveling all over the world with her husband, a man she met out in Colorado one summer."

"Miss De Wald is living on a ranch in Colorado with her husband. No doubt she is making use of the many things she tried to teach you Sophomores in Physiography. Now let's see who else was there?" she asked.

"Miss Parker, Miss Davis, and Miss Kistler." I replied.

"Oh yes, Miss Parker. She married a very wealthy man from the East and at present is making her home in New York. Here she is a society as well as a literary leader."

During the war Miss Davis went to Washington D. C. where she met a young man. A romance of several years followed and then a marriage. Now she is living in Washington but she still makes good use of her mathematics, for she teaches it to a little boy, no not geometry, but third grade arithmetic."

"Miss Kistler has traveled in Europe. She is now in Italy, a primadona in one of the leading opera companies. No, she is not married—she preferred a career."

Just as she finished this sentence a bell rang. Then she arose and said, "All right, dinner is at last ready and—"

Suddenly I was startled by a touch on my shoulder and some one saying, "Wilma, you have slept this whole period, what is the matter?"

I looked up and saw Miss Galbraith frowning and angrily speaking to me. I looked around and saw that I was in Highland High Assembly and was once more a Sophomore.
It was a cold winter night in the slums of New York City, and it was especially cold in the rude tenement house, which formed a shelter for Betty and her mother.

As the minutes passed by and the wind blew stronger outside. Betty, sat patiently by the bedside of her sick mother. In her short life she had experienced many hardships, but it seemed to her now as if nothing had ever been so dreadful as this. for her little blue-eyed, curly-haired mother, whom she dearly loved, and who was the only friend she had ever known, was dying.

Faintly she heard her mother call out to her, and in the silence of the night, with her eyes filled with tears, she heard the story, how, many years ago when still a young girl, her mother had married a man twice her age, and gone to live at his beautiful home. Life was all happiness for a few years, until Betty and her little twin sister Lottie were two years old. Then she had quarreled with their father, and a divorce had followed. She had taken Betty and he remained with Lottie at his home.

The candle flickered and went out, as a strong gust of wind shook the old frame building. The dim street light shone in on Betty and her mother as they lay asleep. one peacefully asleep, forgetful of her troubles. and the other asleep forever.

It was thus that the landlady, Mrs Mahoney found them, the next morning. Her good old Irish heart was touched and if it had not been for her, Betty might have fared worse than what she really did.

One day, while selling papers, a flashily dressed lady stopped her. The woman persuaded Betty to come with her to a large brick building, where she was introduced to a number of big brutish-looking men, who were smoking and playing cards. They paid a great deal of attention to her and remarked that she would be just fine for the job.

She spent the night with the woman, who told her her name was Lizzie. The next day, she was given instructions as to what she was supposed to do that evening.

They took her to a large house in the residence district of the city. One of the men servants employed in the home, placed a packet on the table in the drawing room. In order to be sure of not being caught in the act, they had forced Betty to enter the house and get the papers.

Slowly she wound her way up the stairs, unconscious of the wrong she was doing, yet with a vague sense of fear. She entered the drawing-room, which was lighted by a low fire in the grate. She looked around the room, bewildered by its beauty and magnificence. Suddenly her eyes fell upon a picture above the fireplace. It was a large painting of two little girls dressed exactly alike, one with yellow curls, the other with black. Betty looked down at her own black curls and a slow realization came over her of a resemblance between the girl in the picture and herself.

In her study she had sat down by the fire-place. Down the stairs came a little girl, all in white, with yellow curls streaming over her shoulders. Slowly she came toward the fire.

In the morning the father found them, lying side by side near the fireplace, exactly alike, yet extremely oppositie.
"A Birthday Surprise."

Am I awake? Can it be true? What has happened? These were the questions which ran through Elizabeth Ann’s confused mind. For who would not be surprised upon looking into the long mirror on the opposite wall and seeing one’s self dressed in a dainty flowered dress, tight at the waist and with a long full skirt, the kind worn by our grandmothers?

Bethany, as she was called for short, walked nearer to the mirror and looked at herself more closely. Yes, she was awake, but she blinked her eyes several times again and touched the cameo pin on her kerchief to be sure. Why this was the very dress worn by the young girl in the picture in her own room. Bethany’s father had told her this was his grandmother’s younger sister, Ann, very delicate and much loved by all who knew her. Bethany was partly named after this girl and even resembled her, except in health.

Again and again Bethany turned before the mirror to see the quaint way in which her golden curls were dressed and how graceful she looked in this frock. Then suddenly she stopped for there, before the fireplace sat a lady, dressed after the same fashion as herself.

The lady beckoned to Bethany, who slowly went over to the fireplace and sat down in a chair near the strange visitor. Bethany looked at her a long time and thought she had seen the face or a picture of the face before. Then the Lady smiled and spoke in the softest voice Bethany had ever heard.

“My dear Elizabeth Ann, I know you do not know me. I should have come sooner, for I am your great-grand-mother, but I knew you could hardly appreciate what I have done for you before you were at least sixteen years old.” These were the strange words Bethany seemed to hear.

So this was her great-grandmother. Well, this certainly seemed impossible but then,—why of course it must be true. The grandmother did not say anymore but looked around the room a little while.

When she spoke again, she said, “I see you have remodeled the house a bit, but not very much. I am glad it is so for I spent the happiest years of my life here.”

Again there was a few minutes silence. Bethany was embarrassed as she thought she ought to speak, but did not know what to say. After a period that seemed almost endless to Bethany, the visitor rose, told her bewildered hostess to follow, and walked up the stairs. She lead the way to Bethany’s own room.

After both had entered and were again seated, she said, “Bethany, in this room are hidden some valuable jewels, which have been in our family for generations, but which many years ago were hidden on account of the fear that they might be stolen. After they are brought to light again I shall give to you some of the most precious pieces.”

Bethany wanted very much to tell her grandmother that the box containing these jewels had been found at the time when the house was repaired and that just this very morning she had been given, from these, an emerald ring and a pin set with pearls for her birthday gift. But just then some one said, “Happy Birthday Bethany.” It wasn’t her grandmother either for it was a very different voice. She looked and there sat her friend Mae in the very chair where the great-grandmother had been and who now was nowhere around.

Laughingly Mae said, “I hated to wake you, but I couldn’t wait much longer.”
"Definition of a Friend."

What is a friend? I will tell you. It is a person with whom you dare to be yourself. Your soul can go naked with him. He seems to ask you to put on nothing, only to be what you are. He does not want you to be better or worse. When you are with him you feel as a prisoner feels who has been declared innocent. You do not have to be on your guard. You can say what you think, express what you feel. He is shocked at nothing, offended at nothing, so long as it is genuinely you. He understands those contradictions in your nature that lead others to misjudge you. With him you breathe freely. You can take off your coat and loosen your collar. You can avow your little vanities and envies and hates and vicious sparks your meanness and absurdities and in opening them up to him they are lost, dissolved in the white ocean of his loyalty. He understands. You do not have to be careful. You can abuse him, neglect him, berate him. Best of all, you can keep still with him. It takes no matter. He likes you. He is like fire, that purifies all you do. Through and underneath it all he sees, knows and loves you. A friend, I repeat, is one with whom you dare to be yourself.—Dr. Frank Crane.

"A Senior's Wooing."

Today I would receive my answer. I had worked from early morn till late at night for many weeks with the one thought of winning her. Now suppose I should receive a negative answer. Bill was the only one who knew what kind of a letter I was expecting and he thought I was 'out of luck' so all I could do was hold my thumbs and hope.

The cracks in the wall had all been carefully covered, the windows cleaned so that the panes were all but invisible, and the new carpet was of the finest material. Everything in the house and on the farm was in perfect order for I knew that the condition of her present home was as nearly perfect as possible. And never would I think of bringing the object of my affections to a tumble-down farm house. What would I do if this work had all been done in vain?

Nine o'clock finally arrived so I went down to the mail box to await the coming of the postman. He was almost an hour late and when he finally came he had only the morning paper. Wearily I paced back and forth, thinking "Will I never hear" and "How long must I remain in suspense?"

After dinner I decided to hitch old "Bell" to the buggy and go to town rather than to wait for the mail man. I was so nervous that I could hardly stay at any job more than five minutes. When I reached the Post Office I was handed a letter and it had the right Post mark, too.

I didn't open it in the Post Office because I wanted to be alone when I received the verdict. So I got into the buggy and drove out of town in a hurry. As soon as I saw that there was no one in sight I opened "the precious little thing" and saw the words, "We are pleased to inform you that you have won the Twenty-Five Dollar Rhode Island Red Hen" which we will ship immediately."

“Our Account With Nature.”

Have you ever realized that Nature keeps an account with you? If you will consider you will find that she does, and she is very exacting about receiving what we owe her. Every act of our lives is entered in Nature’s Account books, either as a Debit or as a Credit. Everything we do for the good of ourselves is entered as a Credit and an act that has the ‘‘moste effect is entered as a Debit. When our account needs balancing, Nature obtains her dues by ‘‘blessing’’ us with sickness.

The next time you are sick, consider what has made you sick and you will realize that Nature is collecting the balance due her; but if you will carefully observe the laws of Nature, your account will seldom need balancing for Nature is just. When we become indebted to Nature to such an extent that we are unable to pay her, we are called from this world to a place where Nature’s laws no longer affect us.

“Life Is What We Make It.”

Some of you will disagree with us in regard to our motto ‘‘Life is what we make it’’ but everyone who has an optimistic view of life will agree after considerations. This holds in its truest sense in happiness, for if we are truly happy it is ourselves that have made us happy, for happiness in the real sense of the word comes from the soul, and not from any external possessions or friends and everything else we consider worth while in this life. These things may increase our happiness but the beginning comes from within. Often we hear someone say, ‘‘If I only had what someone else has, I would be happy,’’ but they are mistaken because possessions do not make us happy, but may make us happier.

In business success is due to ourselves, that is real success is due to our success, for in this world nothing is obtained permanently for nothing, but we pay for everything we get and what we have is in proportion to what we do.

This same principle holds proportional to our efforts. We may for a time, using a slang expression, ‘‘get by with it’’ but the final showing depends on our efforts.

“Only Two Hours To Live.”

If it were revealed to you that you had only two hours to live you would have to act quickly to do all that you wished to do. At first you would be tempted to do some foolish or wicked deed but upon second thought you would become serious. I think that no matter what kind of a life a person had led he would become serious as the great decisive hour of death approached.

First you would wish to square yourself with everybody and next you would like to see all your friends and bid them your last farewell. Then you would make your will. After this you would feel as if all your obligations to this world had been fulfilled. You would then gather your dearest friends around you and peacefully and trustfully await the coming of your Lord.

When the Juniors were asked to write on this subject for theme work in English a variety of opinions were presented. Some of the Juniors, writing from the humorous standpoint or treating the matter lightly wrote in a rather flippant vein, mentioning different forms of frivolous enjoyment in which they would spend the last hours, while one, writing from the serious standpoint, stated that she would spend these two hours reading her Bible and praying.
“The Square News.”

Among the activities of Highland High School is the publishing of a newspaper, “The Square News.” This paper is edited by the Sophomore Class and its staff is composed of bright and active members from that group. Vernon Ittner is editor-in-chief while his associate editor is Ellen Stokes. Roland Tschudy is an excellent business manager and Esther Hebrank ably assists him in that line. Curtis Collins is the sport editor and Miss Parker represents the Faculty in a most convincing manner. The force of reporters are: Roscoe Menz, Russell Rawson, Estelle Hagnauer, Irma Koch and Dorothy Rogier.

In editing the Square News the Sophomores can certainly be proud of their efforts and achievements. The reporters are all live wires and the material they bring in is developed into the best reading material by the skillful tact of the editors and managers.

Not only does the Square News speak for the good of the Sophomore Class but for the good of the whole school. It shows that the school has some “pep and spirit.” It gives the English classes an opportunity for practical journalist work. In addition to these features it furnishes good clean amusement and serves to bind the students more closely in their work and play.

Therefore, in conclusion we may say that the Square News and its managers are worthy of all the praise accorded them and it is to be hoped that the classes to follow will take up the good work of the Sophomores and keep up the newspaper work that has been started.

“Copying.”

Copying is classed undoubtedly by some students, as one of the fine arts. Have you ever noticed how cleverly and quickly one pupil can obtain information from another? A pupil who practices this is generally much quicker in obtaining information than one that does not. But you can always tell the experienced person in copying, because he never knows as much as the average student. Copying does not really benefit one, if it is really looked at right. What you copy is not your original work, but somebody else’s and in this world originality is the thing that makes a goal for all of us. This also applies to later life, if you use your own ideas and do not copy, you will always gain a higher position than the man who copies.

“...There is so much good in the worst of us.
And so much bad in the best of us.
That it ill behooves any of us
To talk about the rest of us.”

If these lines were stamped on every High School student’s mind, it would bring about a greater feeling of unity. Cooperation is what we need in High School, and without the proper attitude toward each other in class, study periods, and school work in general, cooperation is impossible. To accomplish the greater tasks in life, one must conquer the minor factors, one of which is talking about one’s next door neighbor, or in High School one’s so-called “friends.” Everytime you begin to talk unfavorably about your “friends” high grade, just pinch yourself and change the subject. After all, does it really benefit you or your competitors to speak ill of them? It brings about bitter feelings among students and this “minor factor” is a great menace to Unity! Unity is at the bottom, or foundation of Cooperation. Just try to strive for this goal! See how easy it is!

"Ability—Work Done."

The result of the Otis Intelligence Test given to the pupils of our High School revealed that if the work done by these pupils was proportional to their native ability we would have some surprisingly good grades made. This test showed that a large percentage of the students rank above the normal for students of their age. However, this does not mean that having ability determines that their work is well done; for often the pupil who has great natural ability is the one who does not apply himself and he may be likened to a powerful engine fed with poor fuel and consequently the result is poor. While on the other hand often the pupil who has moderate ability applies himself and thus forges ahead of the one who does not make use of that which he has.

This same principle holds true in life for many a genius has failed to make himself known because he lacked the push to forge ahead and thus he remains a mediocre man when he could have become famous the world over.

We are often inclined to think that students who make good in school are naturally bright. That is, we think they learn things much more easily than others. But if we inquire into the matter we will find that in most cases this is not true. It is the student that works and does things that makes good grades.

We find that this holds true in all the different walks of life, namely that genius goes hand in hand with hard work.

It can not be denied that geniuses are sometimes born but the majority are made by training, environment and hard work.

"Tis a Grand And Glorious Feelin."

When exams are drawing nigh,
And you wish your marks were high;
When reviews are in full swing
And your tho'rs are on the wing;
And your sit up late at nights
Wasting coin on electric lights;
And your mind you vainly cram
For that History exam;
Then to school you sadly come
Feeling very, very glum;
When with greatest joy you see
That you have not lost your "E"
And your teacher says that ye
Will escape from history!——
‘Then there’s joy beyond concealin’
‘Tis a grand and glorious feelin’!!'

"Some Humors Of The English Language."

We'll begin with a box, and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes;
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese
Yet the plural of mouse should never be meese;
You may find a lone mouse, or a whole nest of mice,
But the plural of house is houses, not hice;
If the plural of man is always called men
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beets?
If one is a tooth and a whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular is this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one may be that and three would be those,
Yet hat in a plural would never be hose,
And the plural of cat is cats, not cose.
We speak of a brother and also off brethren
But though we may say mother we never say methren;
So the English, I think, you will agree
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

9. "What I seriously distrust is the whole idea of sugareoating knowledge and the process of acquiring it. The process of elementary education has been theorized out of the domain of work and into the domain of play."

"The right to punish is the right of society to protect itself from the predatory individual. It is the right to impress and illustrate the immutable law of compensation which associates good with happiness and evil with suffering."

"Refuse to express a passion and it dies."

"Self-government, as the formal expression of moral self, presupposes the existence of an inner appreciation of right conduct, of a tendency to right judgment when confronted by deliberation, and a will that executes in the presence of what is conceived to be a duty."

Social Activities.

"The Junior-Senior Banquet."

The Junior-Senior Banquet was given Friday, April 21, 8 P. M. at the Columbia Hotel. It proved to be one of the best social events throughout the School year. No little time was spent in carrying out the color scheme so effectively, in preparing a good menu, and planning an entertaining program.

After the dinner followed the program of toasts with Lorna Spencer presiding as toast-mistress. Nautical topics were assigned and members of the faculty and student body responded.

At the close of the program, the fleet left the dining hall with a large bunch of "pink and white" sweet peas. We sailed for the gymnasium where the Seniors were entertained at a dance. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all those present and the Seniors are certain that the Juniors as entertainers will never be a failure in life.

"Sophomore Party of Hearts."

The Sophomore "Party of Hearts" was given in the high school gym on February 10. As members of the class and faculty arrived, a tag bearing the name of some famous story-book character was pinned on each person.

There was a string of small hearts stretched diagonally across the room, and one of the features of the evening was to guess the number of hearts on the string.

After that everyone was seated, and given paper and pencil. The paper was in the shape of a heart, and had ten questions typewritten upon it. This feature was another contest to see who was able to answer the most questions. The answer to each had the word "heart" in it.

The next form of amusement was a very entertaining one, consisting of a short sketch given by Wilma Matter, Esther Hebrank, Curtis Collins, and Russel Rawson. The sketch depicted the story of how a doctor marvelously cured two women.

Everyone was extremely interested in the lunch, which was served after the tableau. Partners were found by matching names which had been handed out. Immediately after lunch, several speeches were given by members of the class and faculty.

Another extremely amusing feature was the boxing match between Dr. Hoakem and Dr. Soakem, alias Roscoe Meoz and Roland Tschudy. The two champions were blindfolded ad, as a result, often hit the air instead of each other.

After the last form of entertainment, the distribution of valentines, had been finished, everyone returned home feeling very happy.

"Freshman Hamburger Fry."

The park was the scene of no little amusement Friday evening May 19, when the Freshman Class, accompanied by the members of the faculty, gathered for a real hamburger fry. A fire was built between two rows of bricks and on top of these were placed large frying pans and then the fun began. Miss Parker and Mr. Siegrist finally won as the couple most skilled in cooking, but we were unable to say who should have the prize for eating the most as there were so many good contestants.

After we had all had a plentiful supply of sandwiches the fire was used to toast marshmallows. While we were gathered around the fire Elmer Iberg acted as leader in the popular song concert. As the shades of darkness began to come on our chaperon said we had better come to town so that ended another outing for us.

"Peg O' My Heart" Dinner Party.

Thursday evening, March thirtieth, the "Peg O' My Heart" cast assembled at the Columbia Hotel for their last rehearsal. It was in the form of a dinner party given by their coach, Miss Galbraith.

Everything was in keeping with the play. The table was decorated with sweet peas. The place cards were in the shape of hearts with a favorite saying of each player written on it. There were also candy hearts placed beside each plate.

After reading aloud the sayings on the place cards a sumptuous meal was served and was greatly enjoyed by all. After the repast, the cast presented Miss Galbraith with a silk umbrella to show their appreciation of efforts in helping to make their play a success.

Following a few chosen words by Miss Galbraith, each guest was presented with a bunch of sweet peas and then all repaired to the Opera House Theatre where seats had been reserved for them.

Miss Galbraith proved to be as good a hostess as a coach.

"The Wiener Roast."

The Seniors felt as tho they wanted to entertain the Juniors, Sophomores and Faculty before leaving Highland High, so they invited them to a Wiener Roast at Lindendale Park on Wed. Apr. 5th. Naturally the weather man was not satisfied with the picnic for this date and threatened to spoil the day. He succeeded, so the picnic was postponed until the day following.

Bright and early the Senior boys were out to see if it was possible to have the roast. The sun smiled at them and gave them encouragement. The guests were invited to be there between 5:30 and 6:30 P. M. Group after group wended their way into the valley. No decorations were necessary as nature was on the job.

The fire was roaring and everything in tip top order when it was discovered that the sods had not been delivered. However, this was quickly attended to and everyone began to do justice to his increasing appetite.

After the roast some of the young folks decided to play three-deep. Others preferred sitting in cars which were parked nearby; so the evening passed. About 7:30 P. M. the gathering broke up and each car carried home some of the guests, but from all appearances Lebegue's Jackson carried the heaviest load.
Social Activities.

"School Picnic."

A day which is always looked forward to by the students is the school picnic. This year proved to be no exception to the rule. Tuesday, May 23, stood out as a red letter date several days before the picnic. The usual parade was formed with the grades and their respective teachers in the lead followed by the High School.

As soon as we reached the park a plenteous supply of lemonade was ready to quench our thirst. Volley ball, three deep, drop the handkerchief and various other games were enjoyed by all. A number of track events such as races, etc. had been planned by the grades and were very successfully carried out. Later we had the opportunity of seeing some of the High School boys play base ball and before we realized it, it was time to eat.

The band added much to the occasion. They seemed to enter into the spirit of the afternoon and kept lively music going until six o'clock when the call was given for the grade children to get ready to march back to town. The High School people were fortunate enough to get their class sponsors to stay with them so they didn't have to come in until later. At the close of the day we were all very happy but thought the next day should be Saturday.

"It Pays To Advertise."

The Senior Class were extremely fortunate this year in the selection of their class play, "It Pays to Advertise" seemed to demand just the type of characters that could best be played by the Seniors. Everyone was strikingly adapted for his particular part and no character could have been changed without spoiling the effect.

The heavy parts were carried by Edna Brunner, Wilbert Lebegue, Max Rogier, Francis Littner and Erna Ambuehl. Grace Kamn, Edith Paul, Richard Iberg, Russel Suppiger and Waldo Hagnauer played good parts although they had no opportunity to make a decided hit with the audience. Their parts while minor were very essential and worked in for the good of the whole play.

All of the cast displayed great ease and freedom on the stage. Despite the fact that it was the first appearance in the dramatic world for most of them they were very much at home and very realistic in their parts. They seemed to have a remarkable ability to forget themselves and to feel that they were actually the character they were trying to represent.

The play contained much truth as far as advertising business is concerned and was replete with choice bits of humor. Those who came expecting a calm evening were forced to come out of their state of reserve and join in the side splitting laughter.

Just as their play has been one of the most successful performances on the professional and Chautauqua stages, it was in many respects one of the best plays ever produced by Highland High School.

"Did You Say."

Did you say Joe Wick is going to become an American matinee idol?
Did you say Mr. Siegrist has a handwriting all his own?
Did you say the Freshmen boys are good looking?
Did you say Latin is easy?
Did you say Ellen Stokes can't play basketball?
Did you say Waldo Hug can swim like a rock?
Did you say Thelo Pabst is "cute"?
Did you say Francis Ittner is bashful?
Did you say you enjoyed exams?
Did you say that some of the Seniors wore glasses to improve their good looks?
Did you say Richard Iberg conscientiously shines his shoes once a year?
Did you say that Jefferson Davis is one of Miss Davis' ancestors?
Did you say Miss Galbraith has a terrible temper?
Did you say Nelson Foehner wears tortoise shell glasses because the color of the rims matches his eyes?
Did you say you liked Esther Clancy's bobbed hair?
Did you say Esther Hebrank is a brunette?
Did you say the Senior girls had "kinda" silly ideas?
Did you say Miss Parker has a sense of humor?
Did you say Clarence Clancy already knows what to do for cuts?
Did you say Vernon Ittner feels elated over being editor of "The Square News?"
Did you say Roscoe Menz invented a tire that would get flat all around, not only on the bottom?
Did you say that every hair on Lucille Hoyt's head occupying a definite place in her 'hair-comb'?

"A Good Joke."

A Tragedy (?) in one Act.

Characters: Highland Faculty. Time: Friday 5 p.m. early in October.
Scene: Just around the bend in negro hollow (3 miles from Edwardsville.)

"Synopsis."

Although it was raining Mr. Siegrist had started home with eight of the sedate dignified young lady teachers of Highland School. Just as they rounded the bend and started up the clay hill in Negro hollow the engine stopped and the machine refused to go. To the right, to the left, in front of the machine, and behind it, these teachers were seen ploughing through the mud. And then they talked! but we need a quick curtain. Later: They reached Highland at 11:15 p.m.

"Topics in Brief."

"If a body meet a body
Working in a lab;
If a body greet a body
Need a body gab?"—Ex.

The real topsy turvey land is in the dictionary for there, age comes before youth, divorce before marriage, autumn before summer, digestion before eating, blush before rouge, examination before lessons, cure before disease, finish before start, and death before life.

Francis Littner has remodeled the old saying that "A touch of nature makes the whole world kin" and says "A touch of ignorance makes the whole world kin."

"All is not gold that glitters."
Perhaps that is the reason the Seniors do not glitter so much.

Keep your shoes shined. You can shine one end if not the other.

General Information.

Once upon a time our Faculty desired to learn just how much the students of H. H. S. really knew from a general viewpoint. So they instituted what was known as a "General Information Test." A list of forty questions were prepared by the August Faculty and the student body was unexpectedly asked to display their knowledge. When the results were all in, it was apparent that great quantities of misinformation are sometimes concealed about the persons of the most innocent looking scholars. Some of the answers were pathetic, others were exceedingly funny. Here are a few choice specimens chosen at random from the various classes:
1. In reply to the question "Who is Lloyd George?" we learned several interesting facts about the English Premier.
   (a) He is king of England.
   (b) He is king of Europe.
   (c) Lloyd George is for England just like we call our country Uncle Sam.
2. The population of Highland was too well known for many to make a mistake but we learned with amazement that a certain brilliant Sophomore thinks it is 10,000.
3. If we had been asked "How many legs has an American?" no doubt the answers would have been 100% perfect but when asked the same question about a Korean a number of the students thought Korean was an animal, accordingly put down 16, 4, 8 etc.
4. Some people evidently have little or no conception of what the preamble to the constitution is as they said it begins in the following manner:
   (a) A quarrel with England, later Declaration of Independence.
   (b) Four score and seven years ago our fathers etc.
5. Herbert Hoover brought forth many amusing answers among which are the following:
   (a) An economical person.
   (b) A State officer of Ill.
   (c) Secretary of Food.
6. Harold Bell Wright, the author, is credited by some High School students as being the inventor of Bell telephone and others say that he invented shorthand and some even identified him as an aviator.
7. Shantung brought forth many different answers. Some of the most interesting facts concerning this province in China were:
   (a) A powerful Chinese leader.
   (b) A Russian.
8. One is amused by the apparent erudition of the pupils who wrote the following answers about Thos. A. Edison.
   (a) He is a music composer.
   (b) He is an English Poet.
9. Dorothy Dalton is not only famous as a movie star but according to some high school authorities is known for the following reasons.
   (a) She is a woman mayor.
   (b) A famous Poet.
   (c) Dorothy Dalton is the girl who is deaf and blind.
10. The Junior class is always fruitful when it comes to manufacturing an answer. Therefore an intelligent Junior was not at a loss when asked to identify Harpers Bazaar. He immediately replied "Harpers Bazaar was Russian."
11. The English teachers gathered some late information in regard to their success as teachers of literature. For instance some of their "young hopefuls" said:
   (a) Ivanhoe wrote "The Legent of Sleepy Hollow."
   (b) Longfellow was an English poet.
12. We will vouch for the fact that at least one person in High School has never come in contact with the governing body of Highland as he said it was the Senate.
13. Some people’s observation powers are certainly poor for as often as they have seen Armour advertisements they still thought Armour manufactured Armors.

APPRECIATION.

We wish to express our thanks to all the advertisers whose willing and loyal support has made possible the financial success of our Annual.

We hope that the spirit of cooperation which they have shown toward the School and its activities will bring them a larger volume of business than the mere wording of the advertisement would.

Pet Is Pure, Rich Milk

...TRY PET MILK—you will like it. Because Pet is simply rich, pure milk in a most convenient form with nothing added and nothing taken away except part of the natural water.

The fresh, full cream cow's milk is sealed in air tight containers and sterilized so that it reaches you pure and sweet.

As cream for coffee, Pet is fine. For cooking with an equal part of water added, it is excellent. Pet, you will find, is truly—

MILK AT ITS BEST

You'll appreciate the economy, convenience and quality of Pet which grocers have in two sizes—tall and small. Send for book of Pet Recipes Free.

WE SPECIALIZE ON THE VICTROLA
—to the exclusion of all other makes of talking machines—because it is supreme—all that any alking machine can be. We have all the most wanted models and sizes, and we have a large and complete stock of Victor Records. We like to be of service to music-lovers. Our store is not only a place where you can buy Victrolas and Victor Records but a place where your preference in music will be given the most careful and intelligent consideration. You can be sure that your visits to our Victrola department will be pleasant.

If it hasn’t this trade mark, it isn’t a Victrola. Look for it. It’s found on every genuine Victrola—but no other talking machine.

Flashes Of Wisdom

Every day is a new teacher and comes with fresh lessons for all who are willing to learn.

Our life is not behind us but before us. Remember what happened to the woman that looked behind when the chosen few fled from Sodom.

The worth of a thing is best known by the want of it.

Privileges should be appreciated and used, but not abused.

The secret of enjoying life is in being able to get happiness from the simplest resources.

The universe is wider than our views of it, even though we look through strong glasses.

The day has eyes, the night has ears, perform your deeds accordingly.

He is wise who is timely wary.

Many "smalls" make a "great."

A man at 5 may be a fool at 20.

Only men and institutions operating under a fixed policy of sterling integrity, survive. The manufacturers of "HIGHLAND BEAUTY" flour have survived and expect to continue offering this well known high grade hard wheat product for many years to come. Every pound is guaranteed to please or money refunded.

Your patronage in all our lines is invited and we hope to merit it forever.

Greetings and sincerest good wishes to graduates and students.
